I cannot reveal a wondrous time
Upon the gay guitar,
Nor the moonlight moon
Nor the evening star.
Look the world over,
And you'll find no such accomplishments,
But still or music I dream.
I talk of stars and bar and rest,
And coke of sharp and fat,
With such a lively glee,
That I can't help but think that I was of masterly the pit.

THE CHATRUE.

MARGUERITE'S LETTER.

BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1891.

What fine weather you out of town folks are having for your annual cattle shows, as I believe the old time phrase used to be.

People who are not on pleasure bent however, have been calling it a bit too warm for comfort, and gladly welcomed the refreshing change of temperature.

It is a great opportunity for the eager candidates for office, and their attendant satellites to rub hither and thither in such changing weather, and add burlesque to a very doubtful campaign.

Not being of the voting sex, my opinion on the struggle isn't worth the paper it's printed on; but if I could vote, I would certainly be the People's ticket, as I am the most moderate and sensible idea than either of the others, and more that prove of ultimate good to the country. It has fewer and dried politicians in its ranks, and more genuine men. All the same, one can't help wondering if, in case the new party should be successful, a very remote possibility of corruption, and protestations, or like everybody else who touches the pitch of politics be defiled thereby. —Tis not of this subject

however, I intend to write.

In this Fair time, one such exhibition cannot fail to attract and interest the people. In the Food and Health Exhibition which opened at the Mechanics' Building

October 5, there are 200 exhibitors until the 26th of the same month.

There is one particular department of this exhibition that will please every woman who visits it. I mean the Domestic Science Department.

Yes, this has been reduced to a size in Boston, or at least that most important branch which pertains to the preparation and cooking of food. Time was when this portion was relegated to servants, and beyond the merest cursory su-

them, sometimes with doubtful results, or when the woman who had charge of the house was like mother, and cooked under protection only what was necessary to meet the needs of existence. But this is all changed, and thoughtful women—some of them journalists—have taken time to study the science of cooking, have brought a knowledge of chemistry to apply to the cooking of food, and there are certain natural and wholesome laws that they are able to demonstrate clearly and forcible for the benefit of the uninformed. One of these lecturers will give talks on the making of simple dishes within the means of all, and then these viands will be cooked in the Scientific Cooker, a new stove heated by kerosene oil, lately invented by H. L. Edward Atkins, who noted scientist, who has given so much time and thought to these matters. These "Cookers" concentrate the maximum of heat where it is needed, without diffusing any into the room, and do a large amount of work at a minimum cost.

We have a great deal about plain living and high thinking, but the phrase shows now how good cooking in order to have high thinking. For unless the body is nourished with wholesome food, the brain cannot work, and one's conduct of life is materially affected.

This model kitchen is but one department in the Food and Health Exhibition of which I shall speak in another letter.

Yours truly,

natural," "profane," have been some of the mildest of the adjectives applied to it. And yet it seems to me that these writers having gotten into the fashion of abusing Miss Rivers' work, cannot change even when she writes a realistic story. For I mean that she is writing a realistic story. She is writing a realistic story, and the result is at once foreseen. Of course, love, which becomes her whole existence.

Given Jean the heroine, an enthusiastic child, with Southern nature and training, with the natural temperament which she has, and the girl is more impressionable; her religion that of the negro, whom God is ever near, a present help in time of trouble, His ear ever open to the cries of his children, send her into the midst of the warm color and passionate life of the Paris art world, and the result is at once foreseen.

Of course, love, which becomes her whole existence.

A witty French writer says women are divided into two classes, whether married or single. To one of these la femme mère Jean belongs; for with the witty wife, came also the motherly feeling of protection for the loved one. The second class, however, is the femme d'amour, who is even the same class of harm. So when Jean finds her husband living a double life of hypocrisy she thinks her death the only remedy for the evil. To the Bible, standard of life and conduct to the emotional child taught by her negro nurse, she goes and finds that "greater love hath no man than this that lay down his life for his friend." And when she dies, very truly reprehensible, but I maintain not incompatible with her life, her surroundings.

All I could tell you many stories I have heard of the life of the atelier, not all with some ending; in fact with more light than dark, but still a picture that would not be a bad picture, but a faint sketch.

So from what I know of life, and human nature, I repeat that "According to St. John," it is as realistic as Howells' stories of shopkeeper shop-girls, or "smart" elevator boys, or even Henry James' Daisy Miller.

MARQUETTE.

Editorial Press Comments.

The ability of Hon. Charles H. Allen, the young Republican candidate for Governor, has already been demonstrated by the splendid speeches he has made since his nomination. His clear cut sentences ring with eloquence, and there is no doubt that he will be a credit to the state. The convention made no mistake in nominating the young man from Lowell.—Norfolk County Gazette.

The challenge to a joint debate between the two gubernatorial candidates declined with thanks by the Republican state committee. This amounts to cowardice, but the party should be ashamed of itself for such a debasement.

—H. C. BRIGGS & CO., Boston.

The argument that Russell should be re-elected because he has made a good governor is absolutely no argument and is only baby talk. The governor should represent the politics and policy of the majority of the people. If that majority in Massachusetts is Democratic, then Russell should be re-elected; if it is Republican then Allen should be made governor.—Brockton Weekly Gazette.

Those who claim that the state was carried off Russell last year by lies, should not themselves try to defend him by lies, especially when they refuse to meet him face to face, and let the people judge between them.—Maiden Evening Post.

—The residence of E. E. Miller, postmaster at Westgate was burglarized last Friday night and $78.00 of post office funds were stolen.

The North Eastern party which came to East Weymouth by carriage last week to attend the Epworth League meeting had a hard time in finding their way back and are said to have spent a good part of the night climbing ground hills.

—A school of crows, which was recently passed through the village, was captured and brought to the police station. They were found to be quite fierce, and were received by those who heard them with the warmest expressions of approval, and were received by those who heard them with the warmest expressions of approbation.

NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31, 1891.

How strange it seems to get back again to the city after a long stay in the country! And such a city! Everywhere confusion reigns. For years the streets of New York have not been in such wretched condition as they are at present. Third and Sixth avenues, which were once the prettiest streets in the city, are now dirt paths, and the streets are filled with piles of paving blocks around which, by narrow paths, one must pass, in order to get into the various stores. Broadway, owing to the laying of the new cable road, presents a scene made up principally of carts, piles of rails and other iron, which have been hauled over the wide trench which has taken the place of what was once the gay and busy Broadway.

Merchants complain, the authorities complain, the public grumble, and the press echoes the sentiment of the people at the time of the great depression.

The time, however, justifies the measure, for surely the city will be very much improved, and travel on Broadway will be much relieved.

In the laying of the cable road, the gas and water mains, as well as the electric wires, receive careful attention; and it is hoped that the work will be done up to a considerable time.

The expense of this tremendous undertaking is about eight hundred thousand dollars per mile, but the portion that has been completed seems to justify the expenditure, by the improved condition of New York's greatest business street.

The disturbed condition of the streets and sidewalks, however, has caused a great number of people to leave the city, and the New England contingent and the majority of those who have summer homes at Lenox and the Hudson have not returned to the city yet, and the social season will not open for another month or two. The reason why some people are back, thus early, is that the various schools have opened for the regular school year.

By the way, Weymouth has just cause to be proud of its excellent schools and school buildings. The condition of the schools, in such cities as New York and Brooklyn, can never compare favorably with that of our English schools. Only the three or four general schools of New York have been condemned as unsafe, and rooms in others are so crowded that they furnish only eight or nine square feet of floor surface for each pupil. There is no appropriation which should be more willingly given or which should occasion less argument than the school appropriations, as they are for good purposes and give a town a reputation for favoring educational interests, and produce fruit in the political stamp—Boston Commonwealth.

It is a poor year for the calamity party.

The warm weather has placed the Western corn crop beyond the frost and the farmers are shipping their products and using the money obtained to pay their debts and to buy winter seed and training.

I never was more proud of my nation than when I saw in a table of expenses of Massachusetts men that Weymouth appropriated more money for schools than any other town in the state. It shows a proper appreciation of American institutions and a high standard of instruction.

The school committee supports the common school system. In a government of the people, universal and free education means a better understanding of daily issues, a more intelligent vote, and a more stable and trustworthy control of public affairs.

It is becoming more unwise, than the present attitude of the New York Preachers toward Dr. Briggs? The Council meets today; and it is proposed to try him for heresy, at a time when the creed of the church is undergoing revision. He is charged with being a heretic for denying the doctrines of the church when nobly and faithfully taught.

The complication is a serious one, and it is to be sincerely hoped that the Council will lay the accusation on the table rather than prefer charges against such an eminent divine and scholar.

NASH.

NORTHWICK'S WIFE.

One of Those Hon-Minded Women Who are so Common in all Walks of Life.

Mr. Howells has this story of Mrs. Northwick. Her husband, and after her marriage had sold self out of Northwick's presence. Her portrait, by Hunt, hanging over the mantelpiece, suggested something of this, though the painter had made the most of her thin, middle-aged blueness, and the artist given her a shade of general character which was not expressive of his own free and bold style that of the facts in the case. She was really one of those hon-minded women, who are so common in all walks of life, and are made up of only one part at a time, and of manifold anxieties at all times. Her husband, from whom she had been days of struggle in which she had joined him, had died in the hope, if not the belief, that she had contributed to his prosperity by looking strictly after all manner of valuable odds and ends. But he had been passively happy with her; since her death, he had been miserably unhappy, and his thoughts, from time to time, had troubleshooted solicitudes and her ordinary uselessness in important matters had obliged him to grieve her while she lived. He often had times when it seemed to him that he was thinking of her. At such times, with a pang, he would turn his eyes from his wife, and turned them from the writing desk which stood on the rug before the fireplace, and looked up into the eyes of her with a sense of her intangible presence in it, and with a dung long to rest his soul against hers. She was the only one who could have seen him in this mood, for he was not even then as much as half aware of his face if he had told her he was a thief. And as he meant to make himself more and more a thief, her love would have eased the way by full acceptance of the theories that ran along with his intentions, and covered them with pretenses of necessity. His wife, however, had not been able to make him feel that he had been a thief; she would have had the mercy; but she would not have had the folly. At the bottom of his heart, and under all his thoughts, Northwick knew that it was not mercy which would help him; but he wanted it, as we all want what is comfort.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9, 1891.
Mr. Harrison seldom holds a special and select reception; if it is not attended by some of Washington's most gorgeous specimens of the gowns, due, and that given to the delegates of the Ecumenical Conference, which is held here. But the ladies who attended in all the glory of their new fall, foggery now wish that they had remained away from that particular reception. They were completely eclipsed by the gorgoness of an English lay delegate to the conference, compared with whose brilliant and dazzling attire, even the most brilliant and distinguished misses. Even the full uniform of a lieutenant of the United States army, which was worn by Lieut. Parker, who assisted Bishop Hurst in making the presentations to the President and Mrs. Harrison, looked sombre when placed beside the color worn by this English layman. The person who elicited the Washington's admiration was Mr. Henry J. Farmer-Atkinson — probably he wears conspicuous clothes for the purpose of preventing the length of his name being noticed — who is a member of the British Parliament, and the government of the country. He has explained, the uniform of the county of Middlesex, a civil force which holds by appointment from the crown. This uniform consists of a red coat, the very brightest red you ever saw; trousers of blue, that peculiar bright shade which makes your eyes to look at and which I never saw before. He also wears a blue sash, a bushel of gold lace lining, in every conceivable place that it could be made to stay, and a long sword dangling by gold chains and continually getting between the blue-covered legs of its wearer, and not only making him look ridiculous, but really putting him in danger of breaking his neck. He is a man of great size, and English whom official titles might be like his name, hyphenated sacrificed when he became a Methodist it was not "vanity," if one might judge by his appearance at White House reception.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1850.

The political thermometer is about "100 in the shade."

The voters of Massachusetts will decide November 3 whether they will continue to have their right to vote contingent upon the payment of $2.00.

To the independent voter, the Australian system is best. He can then cast his vote at any time he will, without any knowledge how he votes.

Will Weymouth go for Allen or for Bas-sell? With a pleasant day and a full vote of 12,000, it is hard to say. But if heavy registration, Weymouth is likely to give Allen from 80 to 100 plurality.

Weymouth voters have good candidates for representatives on both sides—the political fence, and in a choice of men only, it would be difficult to arrive at a verdict.

The voter is to know the cause for the issues and principles of your choice and for the men who best represent them.

Don't forget, after this campaign is over, that the election is settled; it is at the primaries that the most important work is done. All voters should attend primaries and see that their names are on the contest and nominated for delegates and for office. By taking an active part in the primaries you can help to elect the men you prefer. Remember this for next year.

One of the most noteworthy facts to be derived from the figures of last year was that the colored population had been more than twice as large in the previous year. It follows that if the figure has fallen off one-half, it also appeared that the colored population had not increased in the agricultural regions east of the Mississippi; were stationary, or declining.

It looks as if it might prove to be a mistake in policy on the part of the Democratic managers to bring into the state such speakers as Mr. T. C. Dix, Mr. George M. Davis, and Mr. Newell of Tennessee and of Texas.

We are not of the same mind as those stating that the colored man has been more numerous than white men in New England men know all there is to know, or have any knowledge of the colored man coming from the South, but we recognize the fact that there exists a prejudice in the minds of a portion of our people against colored men. This is a fact which must be dealt with, and it may be well to let the governments from the South and West, and it may be well to still further consolidate the Republican vote.

WILL DELAY THE RETURNS.

New Rules for Counting the Votes at an Election.

The Secretary of State has issued a circular to election officers, defining a uniform plan of counting the ballots, as required by the great flood of newspaper discussion. The election is one of great interest and importance, and it is well for every voter to vote to think earnestly upon the merits of the campaign and to go to the polls on Tuesday evening in accordance with his honest convictions.

Don't be a Democrat or a Republican because your father was one, or because your friends are, or because your father was, but seek for reasons and good causes to vote for whom you like, and let the other and remember that the principles at issue are always more important than the men.

At the Tremont Temple debate last Friday evening the honors seemed to be with Liberals, but the Republicans had a careful reading of the subject matter of the speeches fail to convince the reader that Gov. Russell had been an unworthy governor. In fact he found very little to criticize except the general fare, and had not visited the state institutions as many times as did some former governors. The idea that some of the few Republican papers come out boldly and acknowledge that there is nothing against him personally but they oppose his re-election because of the effect it would have upon the state. Their fair intention to discuss issues and party politics without desecrating to personal malice, is to be commended.

Will Assist the Voter.

We hope every voter will read all the political matter in our columns this week that he may be able to vote intelligently.
The discussions are able and strong and the matches are well made. The voter ought, after a careful perusal of this issue, to make up his mind how to cast his vote.

The Largest Registration.

The following figures show what has been done in registration in the last few days:

Ward 1.	1800	1801	1802
2.	330	25	355
3.	754	75	82
4.	504	54	558
5.	304	13	317
6.	247	38	465
7.	200	38	252

This makes the largest registration state that Weymouth ever had. The registering places have been the skirmish line. The battle will be fought at the polls.

So Wish the People.

On the whole, one of the most highly contested campaigns Massachusetts has ever witnessed, one would naturally ask, why is this interest, why is all this enthusiasm?

Some say that "nothing but the state issues are at stake," but such is not the fact.
While the state issues are important, the decisions on which the parties divide the livings of the hour, are as broad as the interests which are important as the rock on which it is founded.

It is not a question of Jeff. Davis, Johnson, Sumter, or any other Southern statesman, but what is right and best for to-day, and the people differ, and honestly, upon the decision which is wise. Our important issues Massachusetts voters in particular had in the past had great weight through the country, and her voice will be heard on Tuesday night, that her influence will be thrown for the best interests of the people.

The Representative Outcome.

Quincy and Weymouth were Democratic last year, but when it was decided three Democratic representatives.

The Republicans enjoyed the pleasure of constituting a majority, and the elections were paid off, and many sources say that the Democrats seem to be solidly united for an early election.

The state will be divided. That it is impossible to make any reliable prediction as to the result, it would be difficult to predict that the Democrats will be successful, probable that the Democrats will be elected, at least one and quite likely two with a chance for the third. The Republicans, however, will be elected, a large majority, and that the increase will be mostly Republican. The Quakers (about 200) are registered for the first time, and all claim to be Replicans, and the mediaconcerned will prove this, but if it is so, the Republicans are likely to be a clean sweep and elect a Quaker to the legislature. There never was a more uncertain election, to our view, than the coming one as far as the political complexion of the district is concerned.

We must wait for the result.

The Report for Governor.

In summing up the gubernatorial situation and the chances of both sides for success, it is evident that the chances of Massachusetts is a Republican state. Somettimes, in years, it has gone Democratic for a time, and sometimes again, any considerable proportion of the state's ticket has been Democratic. On all occasions when nominations have been held, in presidential and state elections, the party which is always welcome.

CHAPTER III.

A woman "run-down," overworked—that's a saying that Dr. Price's Favorite Prescription is made for. It gives her health and strength. All woman's ailments are cured by it. It's a legitimate medicine—not a beverage; an invigorating, restorative tonic and a soothing and strengthening nervine, free from alcohol and injurious drugs. It imparts tone and vigor to the whole system.

For all functional irregularities, periodic pains, organic displacements and uterine diseases, it's a positive remedy.

A guaranteed one. If it doesn't give satisfaction, in every case, the money paid for it is refunded. No other medicine for women is sold on these terms. That's because nothing else is "as good." Perhaps the dealer will offer something that's "better." He means that it's better for him.

"Will you accept my escort, Miss Helen?" he asked courteously. "This world is a lonely place, and particularly unsafe in these unquiet times and at the hour."

"It seems infected with spies at any rate. Who would be safe against them?"

"I am not nothing, mother, only the slightest sort of a sprout, you see. I was walking so rapidly, but I am perfectly well now. I—I—" becoming vaguely confused. "With her head up, she went swiftly past him, noticing him no more than if he had been the tree again which he had leaned on. With one stride he was beside her.

"And your brother, my poor child?"

"Oh! He's got nicely. In good spirits, and says we shall hear from him in a few days at farthest."

"Is he well? Is he strong?"

"Yes, he is well, and very strong."

"He has been away?"

"Yes, he has been away."

"How long?"

"About two weeks."

"What did he do?"

"He has been away."

Oct. 30, Mr. George Riddle. THE READER (of New York).

The Old Colony Association of Universalists Meets at South Weymouth—Installation.

"It was many years ago that this meeting was a success, but it seems to have been wonderfully revived," were the graphic words of Rev. Dr. Emerson, D. D., of the First Universalist Church of the Association of Universalist churches in the Second Universalist church, South Weymouth.

At 10 o'clock Rev. Amos Titus, a former pastor of the South Weymouth Society, gave a conference meeting on the "Life of Christ."

At 11 o'clock there was a service of Weymouth prayer. Rev. H. E. Cushman of Plymouth was secretary. A nominating committee was appointed to report a list of officers for the year.

At 12 o'clock devotional services were conducted by Rev. A. H. Atwood, the man on "The Authority of the Bible." The service was delivered by Rev. B. F. Pfifer, secretary and treasurer, Rev. L. W. Atwood, executive committee, Rev. H. J. Joy of Somerville, Rev. W. E. Lovell of Weymouth; Miss Mary O. Nash of Abington; preacher of the occasional sermon, Rev. W. L. Lyon.

At 2 o'clock Rev. J. P. Hargett of North Carolina, a recent convert to the Universalist cause, addressed the audience on "Mission Work: How to do it."

President E. F. Bates offered the invocation. The man on "The Authority of the Bible" was delivered by Rev. B. F. Pfifer, secretary and treasurer, Rev. L. W. Atwood, executive committee, Rev. H. J.
